Cowboy Chic

Saddle up with these Western goods that will have any city slicker feeling a bit of horse power

BY DINA MISHEV

BEST BOOT FORWARD

A little bit cowgirl, and a little bit cosmopolitan, Lucchese's new goat leather Jenna bootie is fully cute.

$595, LUCCHESE.COM

Easy Rider

When handmade cowboy boots aren't enough, enter a Pinto Ranch saddle, imagined and made by master leather craftsman Julio Peña.

From $3,300, PINTORANCH.COM

SORREL RIVER RANCH (TOP)

Flower Power

Used as a clutch or paired with a purse, this Juan Antonio-designed, inlaid leather wallet makes a statement. $160, ACOWGIRLSPROMISE.COM

Fine and Dandy

A Rockmount shirt is in the permanent collection of the Smithsonian — it was the first cowboy shirt to feature snaps. But the 100 percent cotton shirts, made since 1946, are made for everyday wear. $110, ROCKMOUNT.COM

Head's Up

With a 4-inch brim and cattleman crease crown, Resistol's 20X Tarrant felt hat — made from a blend of rabbit, wild hare and beaver — looks as good as it works. $524, RESISTOL.COM

PAGE TURNER

There's no better photographic tribute to the West's most iconic animal than the late David R. Stoecklein's lavish 300-page The Western Horse.

$60, THESTOECKLEINCOLLECTION.COM

Buckle It

Andy Stevens' hand-tooled floral belts are almost too beautiful to wear. But the leather artist would be sad if you didn't; each is as rugged as it is refined. $350, MAIDASBELTS.COM

Old Is New Again

The stitch pattern on Olathe Boots' Latigo Cowboy Boot is from a design in the company's 1938 catalog. Its American spring steel shanks will keep them comfy until 2038. $425, OLATHEBOOTS.COM
